for Youth

Parenting is an awesome responsibility! Join hundreds of other parents who have participated in the workshops below and take an active role in promoting positive youth development. By attending you will build confidence and skills to promote healthy youth development by:

- Studying the research of resiliency and the theory behind the 40 developmental assets that are recognized as the protective factors needed for healthy development.
- Recognizing that building assets is a positive approach to helping youth grow into healthy, motivated, confident, caring and responsible adults.
- Developing a family mission statement allowing you to develop and monitor a clear set of guidelines and expectations of behavior.
- Meeting and sharing with other parents the partnerships needed to insure our youth reach their individual and academic potential.
